How will can I travel to White Bay Power Station?

The best way to get to White Bay Power Station is via public transport. There is no on-site parking available.

Transport for NSW is providing a Special Event Bus service during Biennale opening hours. This dedicated 443 special event bus service will be direct from Stand B at the QVB on York Street to the forecourt of White Bay Power Station.

Route 443 event bus operating times:

- Weekdays Tue - Fri: Buses will run approximately every 10 to 15 minutes from 10.30am to 7pm, and on Wednesdays buses will run until 10pm.
- Saturdays: Buses will run every 15 minutes from 10.30am to 6.30pm.
- Sundays and all days of the Easter Long weekend (Good Friday – Easter Monday): Buses will run every 15 minutes from 10.30am to 6.30pm.

The regular 441 and 442 bus services will still operate as usual and make stops on Robert Street outside the venue. Other regular bus and ferry services will still operate providing transport options for people across Sydney.

Vintage buses

Every Saturday and Sunday during the Biennale, vintage buses will operate on the route 443 special event service between QVB (Stand B, York St) and White Bay Power Station.

Vintage buses will run every half hour from the QVB, starting at 10.20am, with the final round trip leaving at 7.50pm. See the full timetable at the Sydney Bus Museum website.

These buses are very popular, so if you plan to catch one, please leave plenty of extra travel time as long queues are expected. You can also catch the regular route 443 buses leaving more frequently from the same stop at QVB.

The vintage buses are free, or you can provide an electronic donation.

Is there a cost for the 443 special event bus service?

Normal public transport fares apply.
